Regents Week for Addison Students Begins Next Monday in AHS

Students, parents and guardians asked to note schedules so that pupils will be on time for examinations—Mornings at 9:15 and afternoons at 1:15 scheduled times.

Students and others in Addison High School in company with thousands of children throughout the country, are "cramming" this week in preparation for examinations and regents next week. More work has been done by some students during the past two weeks than has been done all season in preparation for these examinations.

The schedule of regents and local examinations has been released by Principal Irving R. Gladstone. Parents and guardians of children are asked to read the schedule of regents so that children may be in school on time for each examination.

Monday, June 20 at 9:15 A. M. there will be regents in geography, history B, American history and typewriting I. Monday afternoon there will be regents in elementary United States history, Latin two years, economics and French two years. Also examinations in comprehensive vocational subjects.

The schedule for Tuesday is as follows: 9:15 A. M., elementary English, English four years, plane geometry, business arithmetic and elementary algebra: Tuesday at 1:15 P. M., spelling, silent reading, physics, chemistry, shorthand II and representation I.

The Wednesday schedule of examinations and tests is: 9:15 A. M., arithmetic, intermediate algebra, bookkeeping II and business management. In the afternoon at 1:15 o'clock there will be Latin three years, civics, economic citizenship and home economics II.

Thursday, June 23 there will be regents in history A and business law at 9:15 A. M. and at 1:15 there will be only one regents examination and that will be English three years.

Friday's program consists of comprehensive music only at 9:15 in the morning.

Teachers will begin grading papers as soon as examinations are over so that by Friday night most of the students will know whether they have passed or not. This passing problem is of vital importance to members of the senior class for graduation with their class. Other undergraduate students will have make-up time in the next terms, but there will be no next for those who hope to graduate.

Besides the fines each defendant was ordered to make restitution to Mr. Merrill for the fowls.

The investigation was conducted by Trooper F. J. Driscoll of the State Police at Canisteo assisted by Edward A. Booth, Chief of Police at Elkland, and former deputy sheriff, George Dorrance. When questioned by Trooper Driscoll, the men confessed making two trips to the Merrill home, one on June 8 and the other the following night when the chickens were taken. Library Shows Tax Tokens From Many States

State Taxation is a real problem to law makers and also to the taxpayers. Several states have created tax tokens to let Mr. and Mrs. Public know how much they are paying for the privilege of shopping in that particular store.

Mrs. Willis R. Perry, librarian in the Addison Public Library has a collection of such tokens gathered from various parts of the country to show what the citizens of various states are charged.

Among tax tokens on display in the library are: Alabama, one mill, Arizona, five mills, Colorado two mills, and also one-fifth of a cent token, Louisiana, one and five mill tokens, Kansas, two mills, Mississippi, a one mill token, New Mexico a five mill token and also an emergency tax token with a one mill assessment on each five cent purchase for emergency school purposes, Oklahoma has one and five mill tokens and Utah a five and one mill token.

People buy these outright by paying for them or are given them in change at a store when the tax is discounted and a less than a cent return must be made.

Some of the tokens are of aluminum alloy, some of copper or brass and others of alloy metals. This display is an interesting cross section of methods used to raise taxes. Some of the coins remind one of Chinese coins with the holes in the center.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Rouse spent Sunday in Hornell with the latter's sister, Mrs. Donald Kelley and family.

Fireworks Users Warned By Chief Bovee

Parents of children and young men about the village are asked to cooperate with the village authorities and the police in the firing of fireworks. There is a village ordinance which prohibits the use of fireworks here on any other day than the Fourth of July. Such use brands the person as a disorderly person and subject to fine and arrest.

The ordinance was drawn several years ago to prevent young men especially from firing fireworks at each other, into passing cars and on awnings in the village and otherwise scaring young and old people by the indiscriminate use of fireworks.

Chief Bovee states he is going to enforce the ordinance which reads:

"No person shall fire or set off any gun powder, cracker, squib, rocket or fireworks, or fire any pistol, gun or cannon or throw any fire ball or make any bonfire, or aid or abet therein, in any place within the village, excepting upon the Fourth of July in each and every year, under the penalty of $5 for each and every offense, but this section and any part thereof may be suspended in any particular as to any time, occasion or place, or as to any person, by and in discretion of the President or Board of Trustees of said village.

"Any person who shall violate any village ordinance, shall be and is declared to be a disorderly person; and said violation shall constitute disorderly conduct, and such person shall be a disorderly person, unless such conduct or violation shall constitute such offender a disorderly person by virtue of a general law."

Cancer Control and Prevention Women's Civic Club Topic

Rochester physician outlines methods of control, how disease is detected, its causes and plans for development of women's organizations to help educate public against disease — This marks last meeting until fall.

The address at the monthly meeting of the Women's Civic Society held at the Addison High School last Thursday was made by Dr. John M. Swan, Executive Secretary of the New York State Committee of the American Society for the Control of Cancer. He said:

The cancer problem is one of the serious matters demanding concerted action on the part of the medical profession, the health authorities and the layman, in the endeavor to find an answer. There must be an answer, but that answer is not in the back of the book.

The health authorities furnish us with the figures which indicate the extent of the problem. The medical profession is in a position to make public the facts concerning the development, spread, diagnosis and treatment of cancer as they are understood today. The layman is an important link in the chain, because he must learn the facts and then take appropriate action. In New York State the health authorities are carrying on an important activity in its Division of Cancer Control, which is responsible for the examination and treatment of the patient at the New York State Institute for the Study of Malignant Disease in Buffalo.

The New York State Committee of the American Society for the Control of Cancer has been in cooperation with the State Department of Health and the organized medical profession of the state, for the past eleven years carrying on an educational program designed to acquaint the layman with the facts about cancer as they are agreed upon by the majority of the students of the cancer problem today.

Perhaps it would be well at this time to try to point out some erroneous notions about cancer, held by the layman. Many people have an idea that cancer is a shameful disease and that there is a certain amount of moral turpitude concerned with it. This idea is definitely wrong. Cancer is a disease that may occur in any person, and the physician who suspects that his patient is in the early stages of cancer has no intention of implying that the patient or any of his ancestors led anything but the most moral and respectable of lives.

The statement is often made that we do not know the cause of cancer. This is not entirely true. For the purpose of attack on the problem, cancer is the result of chronic

Each person contributing to the fund in any way is asked to sign a "Humanity Roster" which will constitute a permanent record of Americans who had aided the Chinese non-combatants. These will in turn be forwarded to Madame Chiang Kai Shek as a tribute from America.

Each dollar contributed will save one Chinese child for one month in providing food, clothing and shelter. Or one dollar represents five refugee babies kept alive for one month with food. Madame Chiang states that $20 will feed, clothe and educate a Chinese child for one year. There is no administrative expense attached to this fund, every dollar going to relief.

THE "BOWL OF RICE" DINNER

Are we a Christian nation? We are supposed to be, but many of our national acts are far from Christian. Our government has been engaged in the rum-making business in the Virgin Islands. Our hope for profit brings individuals to peddle narcotics to weak-willed persons and sell locoweed cigarettes to school children. We furnish munitions with which the Japanese have been killing off innocent men, women and children in China by the thousands. Three-quarters of the gasoline used to wage the motorized war of Japan against China is sold by American firms.

Are we a Christian nation?

As far as we who live in this community are concerned, we have the opportunity this week to show whether or not we are a Christian nation. Friday at the high school building there is to be held a "Bowl of Rice" dinner, one of thousands of similar events to be held in this country June 17th to show our neighborliness to the stricken people of China. This dinner is not to be a feast at all, rather it is to be a little sample of the diet upon which the Chinese are subsisting as they practically starve in the war ravished areas of the country. As we eat the little bowl of food or the rice cake which symbolizes the way so many Chinese keep alive today, we can gain some idea of the intense privation that has been forced upon these people by the invaders.

That is only one part of this "Bowl of Rice" dinner. The other part is the opportunity it gives us to contribute some of our abundance to the sufferers for whom a bowl of rice offers the only promise of life. Millions of Chinese are dying because they are refugees fleeing from the invaders and cannot get so much as a few grains of rice to sustain them. A few dimes will save the life of a sufferer for several days. A dollar will feed a refugee for a month.

So the "Bowl of Rice" dinner will show whether the people in America, the people in Addison, are what makes a Christian nation. If we give liberally, so that thousands of starving Chinese can be fed, then we will show a scoffing world that we are a Christian nation in act as well as name.

After the conquest of Nanking the Japanese officers let their men run wild for a couple of weeks. No attempt was made to discipline or restrain them. Looting, killing and rapine were the order of the day. A recent visitor to China told the writer some of the horrors visited upon the defenseless people of Nanking. One of the most horrofying things that happened was the torch races that occurred daily. Several Japenese soldiers would come together, each with his Chinese prisoner and wagers would be made as to whose man could run the farthest.. But this was no such innocent sport as test the physical endurance of a human being. No indeed. The prisoners' clothes would be saturated with gasoline and then each Japanese would set his man on fire. The man who ran the farthest before falling down in a hellish death, won the wager for his captor.

Most of these Japanese are Buddhists. Their religion is based upon a cruel, stone god which has none of the tenets of mercy contained in the Christian faith. It is our opportunity to show the difference between a Christian and a pagan nation by liberally supporting this "Bowl of Rice" dinner, the proceeds of which will serve to heal some of the scars inflicted upon China by the pagans from Japan.

WISDOM FROM YOUTH

Some time ago a high school class in a farming community was asked to write essays on various farming problems. One boy wrote, in part: "Two things are necessary to help dairymen. First, farmers need better organization; second, farmers need more education about marketing problems".

That is as true as it is simple—and it applies to all other branches of agriculture. Farmers who scientifically develop and serve markets, and who are represented by well-financed, efficiently managed and loyally supported marketing organizations are, in the long run, prosperous and progressive farmers. They will face fewer periods of crisis than other, disorganized farmers—and in good times and bad they will earn a better livelihood. Marketing cooperation simply means putting agriculture on a business basis, which eliminates hit-and-miss methods, and so far as possible guarantees that the producer will have a profitable market for what he raises.

BENEFITS AND LOSSES

The debate over a market agreement for the New York milk shed continues to wax hotter and hotter. Nearly everyone interested in the welfare of the dairyman thinks the Act would be a good thing in principle, but many see the danger of dictation through eastern dairy farmers being dominated by the federal Secretary of Agriculture.

Under the present Administration farmers as well as other groups must expect that for every government favor coming from Washington they must forfeit a certain amount of freedom which once was held dear by Americans. Innocent though the sound of these various bureaus, each has a hidden danger to freedom which generally saps at the fundamentals long unquestioned in this land. For the more bureaus there are with their hordes of appointive personnel owing their jobs to the continuance of the bureaucracy, the more paid representatives the Administration has in the field working for its perpetuation in office.

The agricultural districts of the west have been honey-combed for several years with these men who have a continuous contact with the farmers to whom they can preach New Deal gospel in season and out. That these government services come free is a fallacy which stands disproven in many a man's mind who has seen how it actually works. For taxes are not the only way in which people pay for a super-abundance of government largesse. Besides paying in taxes we pay with our lessened independence in a hundred ways. Government restriction on every hand makes it daily more difficult to earn one's living by legitimate means.

It is up to the dairymen themselves to decide whether or not they will approve the milk marketing Act. They are the ones to principally benefit if the thing should work as hoped, and they are the ones who will suffer most if it doesn't. Of course there are the consumers, and they will cry out if they find they are hurt.

EPISCOPALIANS SPEAK OUT

Those who have decried the tendency of late to belittle the social and economic dangers of gambling will be heartened by the forthright way the Episcopal Diocese of Rochester spoke out on the subject.

The utterance is especially timely in view of the attention the matter is receiving at the Constitutional Convention at Albany.

There may be said to be three schools of thought at Albany. One would pretty much abandon any attempt to control gambling and would eliminate the constitutional prohibition. The second would modify the constitutional prohibition so as to permit the Legislature to legalize what advocates call "harmless gambling" such as is practiced by some churches and charitable organizations. The third would keep up the bars firmly against what has long been regarded as so great a social and economic evil that any weakening of opposition is bound to be disastrous.

The Episcopalians at their seventh annual convention dealt with gambling without gloves.

The resolution called gambling "a violation of the highest form of Christian conduct" and urged the diocese to declare itself against all forms of gambling on church premises.

It is true that the public has always looked to the churches for moral leadership. People have respected their moral principles even when they have not been willing to follow them.

This action of the Episcopal Diocese is important and should have an influence on the deliberations of the Constitutional Convention.

RECOVERY HOPES

The prospects for world recovery are moderately good. Governmental efforts to "prime the pump" are largely futile. That is the gist of the speech made recently at the annual general meeting of the Bank for International Settlements at Basle, Switzerland, by J. W. Beyen, its president.

Beyen gave considerable attention to the "experiments" undertaken in this country during the depression. While he condemned no specific action, he took the attitude that they had failed. He expressly deplored currency devaluation.

Of more tangible importance, the BIS' President's report observed that 1937 experience proved that abundant gold reserves and cheap money do not necessarily keep prices from falling, and that economic nationalism, with its chaotic monetary policies, has contributed to world disorder. And he observed that the "main incentive to recovery is still the expectation of a sufficient margin of profit over a sufficiently long time", according to the Wall Street Journal's Paris correspondent.

CONGRATULATIONS TO MEMPHIS

Memphis, Tennessee, deserves the nation's congratulations. It has been declared winner in the National Safety Council's Sixth Annual Traffic Contest. Six other cities also won prizes in their population groups: Milwaukee; Hartford; Beaumont, Texas; Everett, Washington; and Des Plaines, Illinois. The grand prize for states went to Massachusetts.

What Memphis and the other winning cities did, any community can do. In smaller towns the safety program will naturally be less complicated and expensive, but similar results can be achieved. Sad experience has proven that sporadic safety drives, no matter how enthusiastic or sincere their sponsors, are next to worthless — continuity of effort is absolutely vital. Public education, plus the correction of accident-prone locations, plus rigorous, non-fixable law enforcement, are the great essentials of any accident reduction campaign that gets results. And preventing accidents is a good way to save lives.

Possibility of Third Party Seen In Division Among Democrats

By MARK SULLIVAN

What is under way is a struggle to control the Democratic party and determine its future course, whether leftward or rightward. Upon the outcome of that depends the question who will be the Democratic Presidential nominee in 1940, and what turn will the party take in that year. And upon the answers to those questions hang several others, having to do with possible third parties.

In the struggle for control, the Iowa primary was one battle. The group that tried to take that trick consists of men who are White House intimates, whose present offices are appointive, whose offices with one exception are not important, whose place in public life depends wholly on their closeness to the President. If this group were to get control of the party, or set its direction, their first choice for the Presidential nomination in 1940 would be Mr. Roosevelt. Next to Mr. Roosevelt their choice would be some one at least as completely New Deal as Mr. Roosevelt.

Until recently it was commonly supposed their second choice would be Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

Wallace Resisted Pressure

But in the Iowa primary, a disruptive incident occurred. Mr. Wallace declined to take part in the effort to punish Senator Gillette for opposing President Roosevelt's court measure. The others of the group brought angry pressure on Mr. Wallace to help. They inspired newspaper publications criticizing him for not helping. But Mr. Wallace, possibly because he is a citizen of Iowa, resisted all pressure to take a hand in what to him was a local fight.

The principal political armament possessed by this group is their closeness to the President. They can intimidate Democratic Senators and put pressure on heads of Democratic state organizations only so far as they seem to speak for the President. One of them, Mr. Harry Hopkins, W. P. A Administrator, has immense amounts of money to disburse and much patronage to appoint directly or indirectly. But as to Mr. Hopkins and all the group, they have little power unless it is thought the President backs them up. And Mr. Roosevelt cautiously refrains from backing them up overtly. By this prudent course Mr. Roosevelt, after the Iowa primary, was able to act as if the outcome were not displeasing to him.

But the Iowa outcome was a serious setback to the group around the President. All the Democratic Senators who opposed the President's court measure, or otherwise practice independent judgment, felt more encouraged. Heads of Democratic organizations in the states know they need pay no attention when Mr. Hopkins speaks. Yet it is likely this group will continue their campaign to "purge" the Democratic party of those whom they do not like and to fix the course of the party in 1940.

In the struggle for control the group on the other side is symbolized by men like Vice-President Garner. Mr. Garner is hardly likely to take a public attitude, though many Democratic Senators have and will. The desire of most of them is to take control of the party away from the group of Presidential intimates. As to the President himself, they strategically assure that, of course, Mr. Roosevelt will not seek a third term. They take that for granted as a matter of tactics. At the same time they wish to avoid overtly offending Mr. Roosevelt. They do not wish the next Democratic Presidential nomination to go to any conspicuous New Dealer. But neither do they wish it to go to any conspicuous anti-New Dealer. If they had complete power and could do as they wished they would not nominate any one like Senator Burke, of Nebraska, for example. They wish not to offend Mr. Roosevelt. They wish not to give Mr. Roosevelt or those close to him any reason for going to a third party or for organizing one of their own. They want Mr. Roosevelt to support whoever is the Democratic Presidential nominee in 1940. To that end, if they control the party, they will probably nominate some distinguished Democrat who, as between New Deal and anti-New Deal, is a middle-of-the-roader

In the struggle for control of the party, National Chairman and Postmaster General Farley is in a position which must make him uncomfortable. He did not join those intimates of the President who tried to defeat Senator Gillette. And when Senator Gillette won, it can be assumed that the heartiness of Mr. Farley's telegram of congratulation was not ordinary political blarney.

Mr. Farley, if he feels free to use his power, can count heavily in the choice of the Democratic Presidential nominee in 1940. He is close to the party organizations in the states and cities. Those organizations, if they are free from pressure from the President, are more powerful than any group in Washington. Mr. Farley would be most unlikely ever to do anything offensive to Mr. Roosevelt. Probably he, unless he is given notice to the contrary, would go on the assumption that of course Mr. Roosevelt would not attempt a third term.

Farley Puts Victory First

As between the group around the President and the group symbolized by Vice-President Garner, Mr. Farley's position is closer to the latter. He, like the Garner group, wants party success in 1940 and is more interested in party success than in any line of thought. "Ideology" does not interest Mr. Farly as much as it does the group around the President. He would probably like a nomination which would hold conservative Democrats within the party, but at the same time would command the support of Mr. Roosevelt and give no occasion to the group around Mr. Roosevelt to go off to a third party.

Some such middle-of-the-road course is more likely as a result of the Iowa primary. Definitely, the movement toward the left is checked for the time being. If the check is permanent, and if the Democrats in 1940 nominate a candidate of the middle-of-the-road type, it will be interesting to see what course is taken by the radical Democrats. Their only alternative would seem to be a third party.

Supervisors Plan to Close County San.

By a vote of 28 to 10, Steuben County Supervisors at Bath, Monday, accepted the recommendation of its planning committee to close the Pleasant Valley Sanatorium for treatment of tuberculosis. The resolution further directs that provision shall be made for care of its patients at state sanatoriums and the sanatorium building shall be altered to serve as a county infirmary in place of that closed by the State Welfare Department. An appropriation of $34,500 was authorized for the work and the Planning Committee authorized to secure specific plans and to advertise for bidders for the contract. It is stated that plans will be in readiness and other details worked out, so that the Supervisors will be ready to award bidding contracts by about July 15. It is stated the building will not be ready for use as an infirmary before January 1. The vote on the resolution as introduced by C. R. Benson, Hornell, seconded by G. R. DeGroat, that city:

Ayes — Supervisors Allen, Acker, Baker, Bates, Benson, Bly, Brennan, DeGroat, Dimick, Hart, Herrington, Houck, Hurlbut, Ingalls, Knowles, Loper, McConnell, McMichael, Miller, Pepper, Reigelsperger, Rhinehart, Robbins, Roloson, Scribner, Scudder, Stebbins, Whiting. Nays—Supervisors Harter, Magill, Newcomb, Noble, Poland, Reynolds, Sager, Sherwood, Tripp, VanKeuren.

R. B. Oldfield, W. E. Messer and E. W. Woodbury appeared before the board in interest of an appropriation in support of an exhibit of the Finger Lakes at the New York World Fair, next year. Supervisor Frank Hurlbut moved that $500 be appropriated for use of the local exhibit committee and it was seconded by G. R. DeGroat, carried unanimously.

A resolution was adopted that the salary of H. Ward Timmerman, deputy county clerk, be effective July 1, 1938 and that no change be made in present salary of $960 of Cora Whitehead, clerk in election commission. Mr. Timmerman's salary is $2,500 from June 1, annually. It was explained that this resolution is adopted in amendment of the salary committee's report, adopted May 9.

Supervisor J. M. Heart read a testimonial on the late Leroy Abbott, former supervisor of Erwin, and the same was unanimously adopted.

President and Business Cause Johnson Triade

By ISABEL PATERSON

It is a provision of nature that repeated shocks dull the nerves. From one point of view, that is a mercy; but it may also be fatal. Apparently the public is stunned to the verge of coma at present. Nobody seems to have responded even by a knee-jerk to the astounding statement made by General Hugh S. Johnson recently at the convention of the Iron and Steel Institute.

One would like to ask General Johnson to verify it word for word. This it how it appeared in print:

"General Johnson revealed that after the so-called 'horse-and-buggy' conference at Washington some years ago, President Roosevelt had told him: 'Business nas bucked me and when industry wants to play with me again, it will be on its hands and knees.'"

Business is any man in a responsible position with any commercial enterprise. Such a man's work, his livelihood and that of every one in his employ are immediately affected by Administration acts and policies. There were never so many new measures. Many of them are incomprehensible, even taken singly. As a whole, they seem to have no general direction except toward absolutism. But whatever they are, the business man has to study them and try to get along with them, while striving for a remedy. It is not only his right, it is his obligation to protest when he thinks they are wrong. He isn't infallible, either; he may be mistaken; but he must accept responsibility, because it will come home to him anyhow.

Is Opposition "Bucking"?

There is no possible meaning to the word "bucking" the President except that the business man has uttered his opinion or registered his vote against the course of the Administration. But if he did not do so when he thought so, he would be unfit for his job and his franchise. It is more likely that he has been too acquiescent than that he has protested too much. The real weakness of the business man is that he makes too many permanent concessions for the sake of temporary tolerance.

"Industry" is not an abstraction. Nor is it a few wealthy men. Industry is every man who is employed in the manufacture and sale of goods. "Industry on its hands and knees" is not a pretty idea. It signifies millions unemployed, on relief, in despair. What can be the state of mind which could anticipate that condition as something to "play with"?

History exhibits no precedent except the Roman emperor who wished that all men had but one neck, so he might sever it.

It is charitable to assume that, even if Mr. Roosevelt spoke those words, he did not mean them. Or General Johnson may have unintentionally paraphrased a milder remark, which would not justly bear such extreme construction. Then what was said to give General Johnson the impression? At least, it seems to have made a durable dent; though General Johnson himself seems slightly wanting in a realization of the import of such words, if he did hear them and kept them to himself for years, or if he inadvertently heightened a less graphic declaration, in a version from memory.

It really goes rather beyond dictatorship. Oriental despots have sometimes required their subjects to approach them literally on hands and knees; but they claim divinity as justification. Dictators are unlikely to confess that they are willing to go such lengths to feed their vanity. A dictator usually pays lip-service to the general welfare, though it be but the tribute of hypocrisy.

The ominous fact remains that it is on the ruins of industry that dictators do rise to power. Any one with that end in view might logically desire the means.

And for the first time it has been made possible for a group in office to derive benefit for itself from national disaster. Hitherto, hard times meant that the incumbents were turned out. It wasn't strictly rational, but it did make the party in power anxious for good times. Unfortunately, this expectation on the part of the voters held its own peril. When men vote for prosperity, they are implicitly conceding its control to political agencies. In the long run, they may give substantial form to a superstition, but in reverse. Politics can't make prosperity, because politicans create nothing. But it can cause poverty, by consuming and obstructing. The events of the last year and a half are not cheering, seen in that light. General Johnson has reason enough to remember now what he heard some time ago.

Changed Business Status

In the 1920's big business executives received excessive adulation. They are paying for it lately in contumely and mistrust. But it should never be forgotten that their great error was following political leads, pouring American money, goods and credit into Europe to sustain a fantastic load of government debts. The public mood of disillusionment ought to be salutary if it kept to the point. But the point is that we don't want it to happen all over again.

Peaches Don't Grow

Mrs. J. E. R., Woodhaven, writes: "Please advise me on my peach tree. The leaves are turning yellow and dropping off. It is filled with small peaches.

"The tree has been treated for forers. Last year the peaches reached the sizze of walnuts and dropped off."

Professor W. D. Mills of the plant pathology department replies: "The trouble in your peach tree is most likely caused by the fungus disease known as peach leaf-curl. If you send some of the diseased leaves I will be glad to examine them.

"We have sent you directions on spraying to control peach leaf-curl: also Cornell bulletin E-314 which gives more detail".

Puzzled by Roses

M. S., Liberty, writes: "I have a fine rose bush which is usually covered with beautiful large blooms. Last summer I noticed a number of peculiar objects on it, like small balls of spittle.

"The bush did not flower as much or as beautifully as in the past. Will you please advise?"

Dr. W. E. Blauvelt, extension entomologist, answers: "I feel sure the rose bushes were infected [illegible] insects known as froghoppers or spittleinsects. If very abundant, they might injure the plants and reduce the amount of blossoming.

"The masses of white froth or foam surrounding the young insects consist of plant sap which the insect has sucked from the plant. The foam presumably protects the insects from enemies; when full-grown, the insects leave the masses of foam and wander about on the branches and leaves.

"The insects can be controlled by dusting the infected plants with a rotenone dust containing three-fourths of one per cent rotenone. This dust is used extensively to control various vegetable garden insects and may be had through many local seed stores and hardware stores".

The Land of Opportunity

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman Sentinels of the Republic

A great thinker once said that every time he stood in the presence of a boy he wanted to take off his hat to the possibilities there represented.

Much the same idea must occur to countless Commencement Day orators as they address this month the eager army of American youth being graduated from high schools and colleges throughout our Nation.

For despite set-backs and discouragements, that thought applies to the young men and women of America today, as to the youth of no other nation on earth.

It was for them—as for their predecessors—that America was established as the land of opportunity; a land where no aspiration could be too high, no achievement too great for the individual to attain by virtue of his own enterprise, his own courage, his own ability.

That's why the men who made America wrote into its fundamental law a Bill of Rights which guarantees to every man freedom of conscience, of speech and of opportunity.

And that's where America differs from those newer governments of Europe, where all rights are subordinated to the will of the man or the party in power, and where individual opportunity—with the press and religion—is in chains.

To the youth of America has been bequeathed a priceless heritage of opportunity, which unfavorable conditions can delay, but must never destroy. It was won for them, often at heroic sacrifice, by the generations that out of a wilderness hewed our great nation. It is theirs to use to the limit of their ability.

But it is theirs also to preserve for the generations that follow. The future of America is not in the hands of an abstract fate. As always, it is in the hands of youth. It is the responsibility of youth, now and through the years ahead, to keep our nation as bright in opportunity, as gloriously free, as did their forbears in the past.

And as we consider the need to preserve that spirit of freedom, which America above all nations represents, well may an older generation bow in respect to the responsibilities—and the opportunities—which await our young graduates today.

Cancer Control and Prevention Women's Civic Club Topic

irritation of various kinds. Of large numbers of persons subjected to a concrete form of chronic irritation, all will not develop cancer; so that there is another and an unknown element in the causation of the disease. However, if a person who is one of those likely to develop cancer if subjected to chronic irritation, can be properly cared for and the irritation removed, cancer will not develop.

There is a common belief that cancer is hereditary. It is not hereditary in the sense that because one's grandparent had cancer, he will himself have cancer. And it is legitimate to say that in the human family cancer is not transmitted from father or mother to son or daughter.

Cancer is not due to a germ. All the serious students of the cancer problem are agreed that cancer is not a germ disease and that it is not contagious or "catching".

Cancer is not caused by eating tomatoes, or white bread; it is not caused by aluminum cooking utensils or by electric refrigerators; and it is not significantly affected by the use of alcohol or by mental worry.

Dr. Swan further said, "Fifty per cent of the women who have cancer have cancer of the breat. This comes from incomplete drying up of the breasts after pregnancy with the result that lactic acid is formed and sets up an irritation. This may develop immediately or may take ten years. No doctor from a casual examination can tell whether a lump is cancerous.

"The forms or causes of cancer are from mechanical irritation, chemical, bacterial and digestive. Of the 18,600 deaths from cancer in 1935 nearly 50 per cent of them were from the digestive tracts. And this brings up the point of cancer being peculiar to women. Men have stomachs and have cancers of the digestive tracts.

Certain abnormalities of the skin cause cancer. It has been said 'no good looking woman ever died of skin cancer'. She goes to a dermatologist and gets treated.

"Cancer can be distroyed only by surgery, X-ray or radium. And before treating, the patient should consult a reliable physician as to the type of treatment.

Dr. Swan answered questions after the talk. He was asked if the use of laxatives caused cancer. He stated it did not. But the material discharged may be hard and cause constant irritation to the lining of the stomach.

The most important fact for the layman to remember is that if cancer can be discovered early and completely destroyed, it is curable.

The New York State Committee of the American Society for the Control of Cancer has been engaged for the past eleven years in an educational program throughout the state for the purpose of getting these and other facts before the people. It is hoped that by publicity methods the death rate from cancer, which is at present 144.4 per 100,000 population in the State of New York, outside of New York City, can be reduced and that the development of many cases of malignant disease can be prevented.

The speaker then told about the New York State clinic for malignant diseases in Buffalo where residents of the state may go for teratment free.

He also gave an outline of the American Society for the Control of Cancer and its work. He said it was formed in 1913 but was slowed by war. In 1921 an educational campaign was embarked upon and with this in mind a Woman's Field Army was organized. In this state it is divided into the judicial districts, with a commander in charge of the district, a captain in charge of each county and a lieutenant in charge of each community. They preach and talk about the cancer control and also raise funds for cancer education work throughout the state. This society is approved by the New York State Medical Society and the various county medical societies.

The office of the Committee is at 457 Park Avenue, Rochester, to which address inquiries concerning the Committee's program and requests for literature may be sent.

The speaking program was augmented by piano solos by Janet Taylor and a musical duet by John Orr and Miss Taylor. Mrs. Irving Gladstone was in charge of the program committee and Mrs. Lilly Chatfield was in charge of the meeting in the absence of the president, Mrs. Fred Farnham. This is the last meeting until fall. Special meetings will be called during the summer when necessary.

An invitation was received from Mrs. Farnham to have meetings at her home and she also stated she would open her home to any fund-raising ventures of the society during the summer.

Some mushrooms are safe to eat, others are poisonous. Can you tell the difference? Ask for Cornell bulletin E—386, available free from the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, New York.

Well it is too late for long-season varieties of vegetables like seed onions and tomatoes. But many vegetables will still yield good crops if vigorous seed are planted this month in good ground!

COMMUNICATION

June 13, 1938.

The Addison Advertiser,
Dear Editor:

Your list of Civil War veterans buried in the Addison cemetery will not be complete until you have added the name of my father Frederick S. Hooker.

If you will consult one of your March issues of 1904 you will find an account published at the time of his death which I believe contains the following facts:

At the breaking out of the Civil War F. S. Hooker was conducting a photograph gallery at Houston, Texas. He was forced into the Rebel army and sent with a cavalry regiment 400 miles up the Rio Grande River to guard the Mexican border. Several months later he deserted and rode between 400 and 500 miles on horseback to Brownsville Texas where he crossed the Rio Grande to Matamoros, Mexico. Here he enlisted in the Union navy on a gunboat under Captain Evans, later Admiral Robley D. Evans. He was discharged the next year at the Brooklyn Navy yard. He went to Horseheads, N. Y. and worked as a cabinet maker until 1863 when he enlisted in the Pennsylvania Reserves, his company being commanded by Lieut. George Humphrey, who later conducted a jewelry and watch repair shop in Addison.

He was taken prisoner on the second day of the battle of Gettysburg and with hundreds of others was started for Libby Prison but later brought to Carlisle, Pa., where he was exchanged and returned to his home at Troy, Pa.

He is probably the only veteran buried in the Addison Cemetery who was so unfortunate as to see service on both sides in the Civil War and in three different branches of the service.

An account something like the above will be found in the History of Steuben County published in 1896.

Very truly yours,
F. C. Hooker.

P. S.—I enjoyed Carl Sutliff's article very much. Have fished with Bill Cook, Doc. Houck and the Bullock brothers in the days when licenses were not required and you could catch a string without half trying.—F.C.H.

Seems Impossible Congress Would Take Such a Course

The cause of free government was given a rude jolt, when the United States Senate defeated an amendment to the so-called Recovery Act, offered by one of the Administration senators, Carl A. Hatch of New Mexico, forbidding government officials charged with the administration of relief funds to use their positions to meddle in partisan politics. The amendment proposed by Senator Hatch was as follows:—

"No person employed in any administrative capacity by any agency of the Federal government, whose compensation, or any part thereof, is paid from funds appropriated by this act shall use his official authority or influence for the purpose of interfering with or influencing a convention, a primary or other election, or affecting the results thereof. Any such person shall retain the right to vote as he pleases and to express his opinions on all political subjects, but shall take no active part in political management or in any political campaigns. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be immediately removed from the position or office held by him, and thereafter no part of the funds appropriated under this act shall be used to pay the compensation of such person."

The Hatch amendment failed by a vote of 40 to 37 with 19 senators recorded as not voting. At the time the amendment was offered the Senate was in an uproar over the Harry Hopkins endorsement of the candidacy of Congressman Otha D. Wearin, opposing Senator Guy M. Gillette, seeking the Democratic nomination for United States Senator from Iowa. Gillette opposed the President's court-packing bill last summer, and this brought him into disfavor with the administration.

"Bowl of Rice" Party Friday In AHS For Chinese Sufferers

Approximately 4,000,000 workers in American industries would benefit by increased trade with China resulting from maintenance of the traditional "open door" policy, Labor's Committee of the United Council for Civilian Relief in China estimated in a study made public today.

"Only the termination of hostilities and the return to China of complete authority over her territory could bring about an improvement in the trade between China and America", the report stated. "As the first step in the restoration of the Sino-American trade, this country must aid in the rehabilitation and relief of more than 50,000,000 Chinese currently homeless and destitute."

The United Council, which under the chairmanship of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., is staging Bowl of Rice parties in more than 1,500 American cities on June 17, declared that the analysis of its Labor member organization showed that "American workers have a decided interest in helping the Chinese people back on their feet so that the open door policy may be kept inviolate".

In addition to the 4,000,000 workers directly affected, the study stated, are their immediate families which probably total another 12,000,000 American citizens. Practically all lines of business, moreover, would be stimulated by the increased domestic purchasing power generated by greater sales to China, the Labor Committee inquiry finds.

Among the industries for "whose products a united and independent Chinese nation would create a voracious demand", the report lists: petroleum, iron and steel, copper, automobiles, parts and accessories, aircraft, chemicals, paper products, forest products, farm machinery, building supplies and hardware, leaf tobacco, cigarettes, aluminum products, clocks, electrical appliances, cash registers and other store equipment, machine tools, refrigerators, radios and phonographs, sewing machines, typewriters, washing machines, locomotives, railroad cars and photographic supplies.

"From 1931 to 1936" the report said, "America was the leading seller to China, and our exports to that country increased each year since the depression lows were established until the final half of 1937. When the Japanese invasion began on July 7, 1937 our sales to China commenced to drop precisely, declining 28 per cent from the 1936 figures during the final six months, as compared with an advance over 1936 of 47 per cent in the first half. The decline in exports to China proper in the first quarter of 1938 was even more severe, amounting to only 68 per cent of the total in the first quarter a year ago. Thus, it is evident that American business enterprises have already sustained substantial losses in the first eleven months of the invasion."

The report concluded that "China's vast territory is ready to open up, and is destined to be the most important world market for several generations. America, with her equipment and ability to turn out the articles China needs for expansion can easily dominate the market, if the open door policy is kept alive in fact as well as principle".

Chief Bovee has the backing of the Village Fathers in enforcing the law against the use of fireworks in the village. The Chief tells me that youngsters with cap pistols will not be molested, but it is the "smart alecs" who throw fireworks at girls, into passing automobiles, onto awnings and against store windows who will be picked up. Strict enforcement is to be the rule, he says and not the exception. A word to the wise should be sufficient.

Addison has a yacht club. A group of Steuben street men have organized, pooled their financial and industrial abilities and erected a dock on the south side of the river. In addition they have constructed a stairway leading to the top of the dike on both sides so the dock is readily accessible. In addition many of the "yacht club boys" have been repairing boats in anticipation of the coming season.

Sunday is Father's Day. It is a day when Father will be given ties he neither wants or can use, sox that probably won't fit and shirts too sporty for his conservative taste.

But it should be a day of fond memories for many. It may be a day for a silent prayer for those whose Dads have gone to the beyond to pave the way for sons and daughters as they paved the way for sons and daughters on earth. For those of us whose Dads are living, it should be a time of thanksgiving. I sure can give thanks for the Dad I have.

I remember as a kid he used to take me places where men went so that I, in my littleless, felt very much grownup mingling with men. God has been good to me in sparing my father to the time when he could see his grandson. And Sunday, on Father's Day, when I go to church and receive the sacraments of my church, they shall be offered for the finest Dad on earth.

Humor was added to the Johns reception in the Baptist Church last Wednesday night when the Rev. Axtell dropped his harness. Those in front did not know that he needed a Murad for that embarrassing moment. Just as he was called upon to speak his garter broke.

It hardly seems possible, but three of the young girls who went to see "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" here Tuesday afternoon had never been to a movie before. And they live right on Orr Hill.

Retail Milk Prices

By LELAND SPENCER

IT IS ENCOURAGING that some readers of this column have asked for a discussion of prices charged consumers for milk. What goes on in the city end of the milk business may seem beyond the control of farmers, but the retail price of milk is important to them for two reasons. The prices that farmers get for fluid milk are the retail prices less charges for handling, processing, and delivery. Then too, the retail price of milk affects the quantities sold. If consumers think the price is too nigh, they buy less milk and more has to go into surplus uses which yield low returns.

Leland Spencer

There are always some consumers who think milk prices are too high. Probably there is as much complaint about the price of milk today as there was in 1919 and 1920 when the price was nearly one-third higher. The buying power of city families has been so much reduced that they have to watch the pennies more carefully than usual.

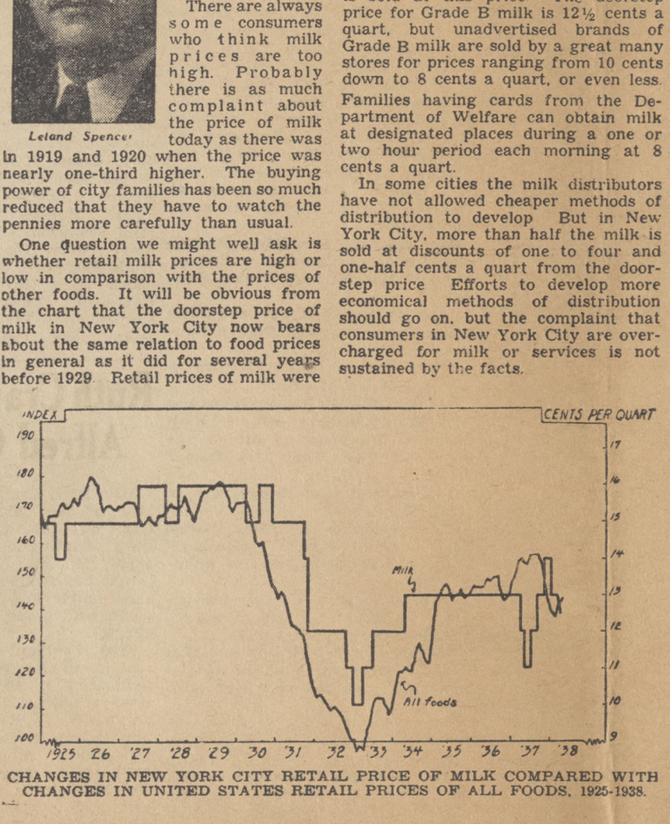
One question we might well ask is whether retail milk prices are high or low in comparison with the prices of other foods. It will be obvious from the chart that the doorstep price of milk in New York City now bears about the same relation to food prices in general as it did for several years before 1929. Retail prices of milk were not reduced as much in 1931-1933, nor did they rise as much as other food prices from 1933 to 1937.

There has been a good deal of complaint that the present system of milk distribution is too expensive — that ways should be found to get milk to the poorer families of the city at much lower cost. Mayor LaGuardia has been one of the chief proponents of this idea. Of course it is to the advantage of the farmers as well as city people that milk should be made available to consumers at the lowest possible price. What is the situation?

I have just received information about the prevailing prices for milk in New York City. The highest price is 23 cents a quart for certified milk, pasteurized and with added Vitamin "D". Not more than one per cent of the milk is sold at this price. The doorstep price for Grade B milk is 12½ cents a quart, but unadvertised brands of Grade B milk are sold by a great many stores for prices ranging from 10 cents down to 8 cents a quart, or even less.

Families having cards from the Department of Welfare can obtain milk at designated places during a one or two hour period each morning at 8 cents a quart.

In some cities the milk distributors have not allowed cheaper methods of distribution to develop. But in New York City, more than half the milk is sold at discounts of one to four and one-half cents a quart from the doorstep price. Efforts to develop more economical methods of distribution should go on, but the complaint that consumers in New York City are overcharged for milk or services is not sustained by the facts.



CHANGES IN NEW YORK CITY RETAIL PRICE OF MILK COMPARED WITH CHANGES IN UNITED STATES RETAIL PRICES OF ALL FOODS, 1925-1938.

Farm Bureau Promotes Buffalo Pilgrimage

It is estimated that 150 Steuben county farmers will journey to Buffalo June 22 on the fourth annual tour organized by the farm bureau.

Busses loaded to capacity will leave from practically all points in the county at about 7 A. M. and the party is expected to return in the early evening. Requests have been pouring in to the farm bureau office this past week, and trip instructions will be mailed each man. Late requests could be taken care of provided there are some cancellations.

Points of interest to be included in next week's pilgrimage are the Buffalo Airport, Field and Trap Club, and Bethlehem Steel plant. The entire cost of the trip is reported as very nominal.

This trip originally organized to study livestock marketing first hand has had a most genial host in the Buffalo Livestock Producers Co-op. and principally R. D. Foley, who has been most helpful in arranging this year's tour.

Members participating in this annual excursion contemplate the best tour in the history of the series.

In a communication to the editor of this newspaper, Senator Thomas C. Desmond of Newburgh, calls attention that June 11 was the first day on which medical examinations could be made under the new Desmond-Breitbart premarital examination law.

"This law", he states, "has for its effective day, July 1, 1938. It provides, however, that medical examinations may be made not more than twenty days prior to the issuance of the marriage certificate. Therefore June 11 was really the first day on which work may start under this new law, which is expected to do so much to curb a dread disease. It will mark a new era in the control of syphillis in this state.

"All applicants for marriage licenses, on and after July 1, 1938, under the Desmond-Breitbart law, will have to present medical certificates that they are free from syphilis in a communicable state. We are confident that the new law will greatly promote married happiness by assuring each marital partner that the other is free from a serious disease. It will help conquer public health enemy number one. There will be fewer admissions to our insane asylums and institutions for the blind; and the next generation will be one of happier and healthier children".

Senator Desmond states that he will be glad to mail free of charge full information regarding the new law to readers of this newspaper who will address him at Newburgh.

BRASS TACKS For POULTRY RAISERS

Getting Summer Eggs

Getting summer eggs is sometimes as difficult as getting winter eggs. Hens which have laid well through the winter and spring begin to take it easy or take summer vacations if the flock owner is not prepared to do something about it.

There are several factors which cause a drop in egg production at this time of year and any poultryman who wants summer eggs can do somthing about the situation. Some turn the hens "out to pasture" so to speak and cut off the mash supply. Then the hens are obliged to hunt much of their living and the owner usually is hunting in vain for the eggs. It may be a fair deal all around but it doesn't make for egg profits.

The green things which the hens eat on the range are valuable but they do not take the place of a good laying mash. A crop full of insects is not a good substitute either. Hens prefer grain to mash and unless the amount of grain fed at this time of year is gradually reduced they do not get enough of the egg-making mash.

Dry mash should be available to the flock at all times and the better the quality of the mash the better the egg production will be. If it is noticed that they are not consuming the mash cut down the amount of grain enough to force them to eat the mash.

With the heavy breeds of poultry the problem of low egg production because of broodiness is serious. Broody hens should be broken up at once if they are not needed for hatching or brooding chicks.

Many methods of breaking up broody hens have been tried including the cruel method of placing them in a pan of water where they must stand hours upon end. Some broody coops are ideal for encouraging the hens to remain broody because they afford them the opportunity of selecting a corner where they can sit to their heart's content.

A small coop with an inch mesh wire floor similar to the laying batteries now in use makes a good place to confine sitting hens. They are comfortable and yet they cannot warm the floor and soon give up trying. When a coop of this sort is used it is not necessary to feed them any special ration and they usually forget the sitting and may be returned to the flock where they will begin laying again in a short time. From two to four days is all that are needed to break up a sitting hen in this way and the hen suffers no discomfort.

Sentinels of Health
Don't Neglect Them!
Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.
When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.
Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.
The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

What Do You Know About Health?

By FISHER BROWN and NAT FALK

Answers: 1. A disorder, usually of childhood, characterized by irregular, spasmodic, involuntary movements of the limbs or facial muscles. An old superstition was that dancing before the image of the martyr, St. Vitus, would insure good health for the following year. Now we know that good health can best be insured by getting plenty of rest, fresh air and sunshine in conjunction with a well-balanced daily diet rich in milk, fresh fruits and vegetables.

2. A leading doctor in London and Edinburgh who was one of the founders of modern surgery of the blood vessel system. A book on surgery of the arteries, which he illustrated with his own drawings, was one of his most valuable contributions.

3. The dried milky juice of an evergreen tree of the Malay Archipelago, employed in the manufacture of splints. It is also used for various other purposes such as to protect and seal wounds.

Glenn Cunningham won two races in the metropolitan area Saturday. He ran a race in Jersey, boarded a private ambulance and was whisked to New York. The first race, a half mile, was easy for him, but competition in the second was close. Gene Venzke, Penn's athlete, ran fifth in the three-quarter mile race marking Cunningham's second triumph.

She will be world champion until the next Olympics and even after that if all goes well.

FRUIT, FLOWERS AND GARDEN

Learning About Flowers

Lucile G. Smith

In response to the growing interest in exhibits of flowers and plants, the department of floriculture and ornamental horticulture at Cornell University is sponsoring a four-day training school for judges and exhibitors. The school extends from June 22 to 25, inclusive.

Although it is called a school for judges and exhibitors, this does not mean it is limited to them. It is planned to give persons interested in judging and exhibiting flowers training that will be useful both in growing and displaying flowers and plants of all kinds, if only for their own use and pleasure.

The first day is devoted to registration and a tour of University gardens, including the rock garden and plant collections. June 23 is "horticulture day"; June 24, "flower arrangement day"; and June 25 "rose day".

Topics arranged for the school include the latest recommendations on soil preparation, fertilizers and culture of garden flowers; suggestions for staging exhibits; successful exhibits and how to judge them; flower arrangement; experiments in rose growing; routing rose insects; gardening with roses; and rose varieties that go modern. Practice periods and discussions have been arranged.

All interested flower growers are invited to the school. Several prominent speakers, including commercial growers and staff members of the New York State College of Agriculture, have been scheduled. A dinner and picnic, too, are on the program.

Little Six Rained Out Sun.—Games Scheduled

Rain caused cancellation or postponement of all the games in the Little Six Baseball League. During the past week announcement was made that the Corning Independents dropped from the league. There is no team to take their place as yet.

Games scheduled for Sunday are: Addison to entertain Elkland, Caton at Sabinsville, Jasper at South Corning, Nelson at Woodhull and Corning Cubs at Gang Mills. Owing to the Independents being out Lindley drew a bye this week and will not play.

Finds Early Cabbage Endangered by Maggots

The high prices of the early market that tempt many farmers to grow early cabbage, cauliflower and related crops will not, be realized unless steps are taken at the outset to protect the plants against attack from the cabbage root maggot, declares Dr. Hugh Glasgow, entomologist at the State Experiment Station at Geneva.

Danish cabbage and cabbage grown chiefly for kraut are seldom troubled by maggot because the plants are not set in the field until most of the cabbage maggot flies have disappeared, but early cabbage and cauliflower frequently suffer severe injury or even complete destruction from this pest, explains Dr. Glasgow.

Corrosive sublimate has been found highly effective in combating cabbage maggot and is most generally used by growers, altho other methods, including the use of calomel, may be preferable under some conditions, says Dr. Glasgow. For the treatment of early cabbage in the field by use of corrosive sublimate 1 ounce of the poison should be dissolved in 10 gallons of water. This solution should then be applied to the newly set plants within 3 to 5 days after transplanting in such a way that the soil immediately around the base of each plant is thoroughly moistened. The amount required will depend somewhat on the character of the soil, but ordinarily three ounces should be applied for each plant. The treatment should be repeated at least once and preferably twice at intervals of a week or ten days to insure complete control. Proper timing of the treatments is exceedingly important.

In small plantings the most satisfactory means of applying the solution will be with a pail and dipper. Where large fields must be protected some single mechanical contrivance, such as a tank mounted on wheels and provided with several leads of hose for treating a number of rows at a time, will lessen greatly the labor and cost of application.

JELLY-VENTURES

by Alice Blake

"IT'S always darkest before the dawn!" Those whose jellies "ran" yesterday will be pleasantly surprised when they try this short-boil recipe that turns out a perfect product every time. The flavor of garden-fresh raspberries lingers in every glass of:

Ripe Red Raspberry Jelly

3½ cups (1¾ lbs.) juice
4½ cups (2 lbs.) sugar
1 box powdered fruit pectin

To prepare juice, grind or crush thoroughly about 2½ quarts fully ripe berries. Place fruit in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice. (If there is a slight shortage of juice, add a small amount of water to pulp in jelly cloth and squeeze again.)

Measure sugar into dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure juice into a 3- to 4-quart saucepan and place over hottest fire. Add powdered fruit pectin, mix well, and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. At once pour in sugar, stirring constantly. Continue stirring, bring to a full rolling boil, and boil hard ½ minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once. Makes about 8 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

Care of Colds

HOW many of us know how to prevent a cold or to recover from one quickly, once we have annexed a cold?

Aside from avoiding people who have colds, what can we do to protect ourselves?

For one thing, avoid chilling of the body from exposure to sudden, marked changes in temperature. Avoid fatigue from overwork or lack of sufficient sleep.

At least eight hours of sleep, in a well ventilated room, will help to prevent that run-down feeling that leaves us wide open for an attack from those cold germs. Wear sensible and seasonable clothes, eat a well-balanced daily diet which should include plenty of milk, fruit juices and green vegetables and some good form of vitamin D. The use of the right kind of foods helps the body maintain its best resistance against colds and other illnesses.

For those, who in spite of all known precautions fall heir to a cold, Dr. Milton J. Rosenau, leading public health authority, has the following advice: "Rest in bed, drink plenty of water and fruit juices. Avoid, as much as possible, contact with your family and friends."

If a cold does not appear to improve at the end of twenty-four hours, play safe and call your doctor. He may suggest the remedies you should take to get you back on your feet quickly.

Potato Growers Hearing at Warsaw June 23

Potato growers of Steuben county will have an opportunity to submit evidence regarding the proposed potato marketing agreement at a hearing to be held at Warsaw on June 23. The hearing will start at 9:30 A. M. at the Warsaw Grange Hall. There are only two hearings in the entire state of New York, one at Warsaw and one at Riverhead, Long Island.

Since Steuben county is the second most important potato producing county in the state of New York, and since many of the potato growers in this county would be affected by the proposed marketing agreement, it seems likely that many county growers will plan to attend the hearing and submit evidence for or against the agreement.

The proposed federal potato marketing agreement is designed to prevent culls, or small potatoes from the states involved, which include seventeen late potato states, from being sold outside of the state in which they are produced. Cull potatoes are designated as those grading poorer than U. S. No. 2, and the small potato is one that is less than 1½ inches in diameter with 5 per cent tolerance.

Other features, within limits, may be added at any time for any part or all of the area including any standards of grade, size, quality features, varieties or tolerances. Individual producers may obtain exemption certificates allowing them to sell potatoes otherwise prohibited from sale, sufficient to bring the percentage of their crop saleable up to the average for the entire area.

More details of the plan will be available later and of course the plan in final form will not be available until after the testimony has been submitted at the hearings.

Motorless Flights Gain New Impetus—Elmira Meet June 25

With the opening date, June 25, only two weeks away, entry blanks are now in the hands of over 100 glider pilots, to cover the forty motorless craft that will compete in the Ninth Annual National Soaring Contest at Elmira.

Preliminary reports made by Dr. Karl O. Lange, contest chairman for the Soaring Society of America, Inc., include the following major awards:

The Warren E. Eaton award, established in memory of the SSA's first president, to be competed for this year, is a new incentive to all who partake in this sport-science. While the more intimate details of this competition are not yet available, it will suffice to say that this award presents new fields of investigation leading to further development of motorless flight. Thus it does not necessarily mean that to win this award one must actually fly in the contest, but rather to have made an outstanding contribution to furthering the cause of gliding and soaring.

The Vincent Bendix award, with a possible thousand dollar cash award, will go to the glider pilot who soars the longest straight line air distance from the Warren E. Eaton Headquarter site. With the recent announcement of a new national record of 210 miles, made by Lewin Barringer, who made a goal flight from Wichita Falls, Texas to Tulsa, Oklahoma, as the mark to shoot at, it is expected that this event will result in twice as many cross country soaring flights as were made in the '37 contest. Last year over forty such flights were made but due to late starts and adverse conditions it was not possible for the glider pilots to fly any great distances.

The A. Felix du Pont awards for altitude are also expected to do much to encourage the contestants to go after the possible thousand dollar cash award that accompanies these beautiful trophies. Here again the pilots of the many beautiful sailplanes that will compete, will have a new mark to shoot at in this category. Recently an unofficial national record was made for altitude when a pilot on the west coast soared to over 10,000 feet from the bed of one of the many dry lakes located in Southern California.

Since 1930 the Evans Trophy, symbolizing the national soaring champion, has been awarded to the contestant amassing the greatest number of points on an all around performance basis. Again this year the pilots will compete for this beautiful trophy and in addition will be awarded a very special barograph, designed and built especially for use in glider flight.

A new award, designated as "The Air Trails Award" will go to the "C" pilot making the most outstanding flight record during the entire 16 days of the contest. This eliminates the "Silver C" pilots who are the more experienced pilots and thus gives the up and coming pilots a chance to compete in their own class with a chance to win this award.

Restaurant Code Changed Under New State Law

Albany, July 14—Important amendments to the State Sanitary Code governing the sanitary maintenance of restaurants have been made by the Public Health Council further to protect public health in the state. The new amendments will become effective July 1.

Restaurants affected by the new regulations are defined as hotels, public restaurants, public dining rooms, dining cars, drug stores, soda fountains, steam boats, or any other establishments where food or drink for consumption upon the premises is prepared for sale or sold, according to Dr. Edward S. Godfrey, Jr., State Commissioner of Health.

"All show or display cases and windows, counters, shelves, tables, refrigerating cabinets and other equipment used in connection with the operation of a restaurant shall be so constructed as to be easily inspected and cleaned and shall be kept clean and in good repair and free from dirt, dust, insects and other contaminating material", Dr. Godfrey said today in explaining the new amendments. "All cloths used by waiters, chefs and other employes shall be clean.

"All, except single service, eating and cooking utensils shall be thoroughly cleaned with hot water and soap or other effective cleaning agent after each use and must also be subjected to live steam exposure or immersion for at least two minutes in clean hot water, or immersion in a chlorine solution.

"All eating and cooking utensils must be stored in clean places and all perishable food or drink must be kept at or below 50 degrees F."

Another important amendment deals with the health of the restaurant employes. This section reads that "no persons suffering from communicable disease transmissible through food or drink, or who resides in a household with a case of such disease, or who is known to be a carrier of the organisms causing such disease, and no person suffering from a local infection transmissible through food shall be employed in any restaurant".

The new regulations further rule that all employes shall wear clean outer garments and shall keep their hands clean at all times when on duty.

Other regulations ban the use of poisonous materials in the cleaning of utensils, and making mandatory the provision of adequate toilet facilities, and a safe and sanitary water supply. Use of common towels will be prohibited.

Local baseball fans will have an opportunity to see the Addison nine in action Sunday when Elkland will come to Addison. Both teams are well up in the Little Six League and this contest promises to be one of the best ball games of the year for the locals. The team has been augmented by several of the former high school slugging stars and with the former squad and the additions, Addison should be well represented this season in this amateur ball game.

Summer Desserts

Summer desserts, to many people, mean berry pies, fruit shortcakes and ice creams; but they can also mean fruit combinations and ice-box dishes that take only a little time to prepare and that make a light but delicious finale to warm weather meals.

Fruits probably offer the greatest variety. Strained or cut in small pieces, they can be folded into beaten egg whites or whipped cream, chilled, and perhaps served with a light sauce and some crisp cookies. They can also be moulded in gelatin and served with whipped cream. A sherbet glass of sweetened and well-chilled diced oranges, grapefruit, pineapple and bananas make a delicious finish for a heavy meal.

Fresh pineapple points and unhulled strawberries are very effective when arranged about a mound of powdered sugar on individual plates. Bananas can be sliced and served in the shell with a sprinkle of lemon juice and powdered sugar, or baked with pieces of tender rhubarb and a little sugar and butter. Baked apples or canned peaches take on a dressed-up look when coated with meringue, browned in the oven and served with a soft custard sauce.

Ice-box dishes require but a few minutes and can be kept in hand for busy or lazy days. Cookie dough can be mixed up and stored in the refrigerator, to be baked as needed. Puddings can be made by lining custard cups with lady fingers and filling them with a flavored custard. Little cakes can be made by arranging chocolate wafers or ginger snaps on top of each other with a spread of sweetened whipped cream between; coat the outside with whipped cream, chill for 2 or 3 hours, then slice diagonally.

Plain cup cakes take only a short time to make and can be varied with different sauces, fruit, chocolate, butterscotch, lemon or with cooked or uncooked frostings.

Speeders and Other Motor Violators Warned

Speeding in Front Street must be stopped according to Chief of Police Elmer Bovee. A drive against local speeders on that street is to be instituted soon. Chief Bovee states that most of the speeding on that street is done by local people who are asked to cooperate with the police in enforcing local laws and to protect children who may be using the street.

Chief Bovee also calls attention to the fact that many cars of Addison and vicinity are being driven with only one headlight and some without taillights. The offenders will be arrested unless some immediate action is taken to prevent this illegal form of driving.

Fifteen Scouts Attend Wayland Camporee

Feeding a fawn brought to the camporee by Game Warden Ray Reed was the highlight of the three-day camporee trip at Wayland for Addison Boy Scouts. Over 400 Scouts from troops in the Steuben area attended this second annual three-day camporee. The object of this experience is to enable the Scouts to prepare for summer camping in the great outdoors.

Scoutmaster William J. Miller with Assistant Scoutmasters Bernard Wilson and Kenneth McCaig were in charge of the local contingent of Scouts.

Scouts in the party from here were: Harold Hargrave, Richard Gladstone, Charles Whitmore, Burdette Rice, Matthew Whitmore, William Edwards, Junior Reynolds, Maynard Allen, Charles Levi, Edward Russ, William Murray, Malcolm Moshier, Marvin Ricker and Philip Hess.

The boys pitched their own tents, cooked and conducted programs in the open. Rain dampened the program and holiday spirit of the occasion but the Scouts carried on through the three-day program. Camp opened Friday afternoon and the Scouts broke camp Sunday morning to return to Addison.

The Scouts were taken to camp by Dr. Matthew Whitmore, Guy Ricker, Bernard Wilson with John Russ taking the equipment. Homer Reynolds donated the truck to bring the equipment back to Addison with cars being donated by Bernard Wilson, John Russ, Bligh Chatfield and Dr. Whitmore.
